Overnights of Hospitality

We are four days away (November 16) from opening our 11th season of the Overnights of Hospitality, our emergency sheltering program for single homeless men.

As this is our 11th season, many of our volunteers are aging and need to step back from chaperoning. So, we are especially in need of new volunteers to serve as chaperones (staying overnight with the guests).

We need two more people with trucks to help transfer gear on five Sundays during the season.

We welcome new volunteers to help serve and prepare meals. A more detailed description of what each job requires is on our website - <http://plymouth-taskforce-homeless.org/PTH/volunteer/volunteer-opportunities/>.

The calendar for the season is on the website.

The names and contact information of the site coordinators are below if you wish to contact them directly.

Persephone's Daughters

We are thrilled to report that Persephone's Daughters will be donating the net proceeds of their November concert to the Taskforce.

"The women's a cappella choir, Persephone's Daughters, will be performing a benefit concert for PLYMOUTH TASKFORCE FOR THE HOMELESS on Sunday, November 23 at 3 p.m. at First Parish Church, 19 Town Square, Plymouth, MA. The concert, "Coming Home," will explore the many aspects of coming home – coming home to place, to self, to heaven, from war, and finally to the Thanksgiving table – through the groups signature blend of song, poetry and prose. The concert will include a few nostalgic songs, spirituals, foot-tapping classics and contemporary pieces. Special guest, singer/guitarist Jim Schulze will perform a soulful rendition of veteran Jason Moon's song, "Trying to Find My Way Home." Proceeds from this concert will go to the Plymouth Taskforce for the Homeless. Tickets: $20 adults, $15 seniors and students. Tickets are available at the Plymouth Guild for the Arts, 11 North Street, Plymouth or by calling 508-747-0212. They can also be purchased at the door."
